PENTELEDATA IS PROUD TO SERVE GREENTOWN, PA

Greentown is a small community located in Pike County, Pennsylvania. It is situated in the northeastern part of the state, close to the border with New York. The town has a rich history that dates back to the early 1800s, when it was first settled by a group of German immigrants.

The area around Greentown was originally inhabited by the Lenape Native American tribe. European settlers began arriving in the early 1800s, drawn by the natural resources and abundant wildlife in the region. The town was named after Colonel Jacob Green, a prominent local landowner and businessman.

In the late 19th century, Greentown became an important center of industry, with mills, factories, and other businesses springing up in the area. The town was particularly known for its lumber industry, with local sawmills producing high-quality wood products that were shipped across the country.

During the 20th century, Greentown underwent significant changes as the local economy shifted from agriculture and industry to tourism and recreation. Today, the town is a popular destination for outdoor enthusiasts, with numerous opportunities for hiking, fishing, hunting, and boating in the surrounding wilderness. Promised Land State Park, which covers more than 3,000 acres of forested hills, lakes, and streams. Another popular destination in Greentown is Lake Wallenpaupack, one of the largest lakes in Pennsylvania. The lake covers more than 5,700 acres and is a popular destination for fishing, boating, and water sports.

In addition to outdoor activities, Greentown also has a rich cultural heritage, with several historic sites and landmarks located in and around the town.
